Course Description

This course offers a first-hand perspective on the arising challenges and opportunities of Israel in a changing region. The course will review the dramatic events that began with the Arab “spring” of 2010 and that have continued to shape and reshape the history of the Middle East. Through field trips and engaging in dialogue with regional players, participants will gain personal insight into the religious, cultural and political forces shaping the changing reality of the region and their influence on Israel's future.
Since the beginning of the Arab Spring, the Middle East has experienced a tectonic shift that continues to shape the geopolitical map of the region. The established political systems have quickly collapsed, leaving a vacuum that is still being filled by old and new political players including radical non-state players that change the political, religious and tribal map of the region. These new emerging realities influence Israel, which remains an island of stability in the middle of the regional storm. Through exposure to multiple perspectives, this course offers students the opportunity to analyze this changing reality and the way it influences Israel.

Site Visits and Meetings
Through multiple field trips and encounters, this program offers the unique opportunity to gain first-hand access to key places and regional actors. Subject to the availability of guest speakers, participants will have the opportunity to meet with:

- Diplomats and government officials
- Representatives of international and non-government organizations
- Analysts and journalists
- Academic figures and Middle East experts

Field trips and encounters will be finalized at a later date. As a reference only, participants may refer to the tentative itinerary for the Coexistence in the Middle East program. Please note that field trips in the itinerary are split among all three CME Summer Courses.

Course Outline and Readings

Due to the dynamic character of the Middle East and the intention to focus on the current issues in the region the contents and readings might be updated.

Introduction to the Middle East, Spring and other Seasons (05/07)

This section will serve as an introduction to the course. What is and where is the Middle East? Who are its key players who had shaped its history? What has changed in this region in the recent years and since beginning of the “Arab Spring”? It will present a review of key terms and events associated with the Middle East and focus on the changing and emerging realities as the “Arab Spring” continues into its seventh year. We will further discuss the course structure and the theme questions that will accompany as we begin to engage with the readings and tours.

Northern Threats: Syria, Hezbollah and the Islamic State (ISIS) (7/07): two day field trip. Coordinate: hospital, IDF spokesperson, Meeting with Druze/minorities, Nazareth and more.

The Syrian conflict was the last surge of the Arab Spring; it grew from a local uprising to a full-scale sectarian, ethnic proxy war that de facto divided the country and influenced the surrounding geography and demography--particularly following the appearance of ISIS. The issues involving Syria are linked to its neighboring country, Lebanon, a country that Syria still views as part of “Bilad a- Sham,” or the “greater Syria.” Hezbollah, the self-defined “party of God,” has gained military strength and political influence in Lebanon with Syrian-Iranian backing. We will further explore these dynamics via a tour to the north, where we will visit Kiryat Shmona, the Lebanese border, the Golan Heights, the Syrian border as well as other sites of importance in the area.

Readings:

Iran Post Nuclear Agreement and the Changing Geopolitical Arena (10/07)

Iran’s conduct in the region remains a major factor despite the nuclear agreement of 2015. Since the agreement, Iran has sent additional forces to the region and has begun to deepen its presence along Israel’s borders. We will conduct a strategic analysis of Iran's current geopolitical agenda which is still perceived as the highest threat to Israel and other countries in the Middle East with far-reaching impact inside and outside the Middle East. We will also attempt to understand Iran beyond its nuclear zone and focus on its regime, its diverse society and on the prospects for political change facing upcoming elections.

Yad Vashem (12/07) including a lecture on the challenge of incitement
Guided tour in Yad Vashem, discussing the issue of incitement in the Middle East Today.

The International Community and the Middle East

This section will deal with the external circle involving Israel and the Middle East: the involvement of external players ranging from Israel’s immediate neighbors and to international organs as well as central global players such as Europe and the US and other significant powers such as Russia and China. The Israeli-Palestinian conflict attracts the attention of various international players, ranging from a wide network of interested activists and NGO’s to the top policy-makers of world affairs. That involvement further extends to the Middle East, involving critical Israeli interests and agendas such as Iran. We will explore the role of the different international players and attempt to evaluate their respective contributions in respect to ending the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and to Israel’s place in the Middle East.

An Israeli view of a changing Region, MFA visit
Lectures at Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs that will cover the Israeli view of the region with a focus on the Syrian, Iranian and Palestinian arena.

We will meet some of the voices behind the Arab Spring and will focus on the role of new media and on new opportunities for engagements created by these new dynamics. We will also try engage with active dissidents and create an opportunity for a live dialogue with dissidents and activists from the region.

Between Axis of Peace and Axis of War (The Arab Peace Initiative and beyond)
The past five years have seen a dramatic change sweep across the Middle East, toppling governments and leading to social ferment, the likes of which have never been seen before in that part of the world. This section will further delve into the realities of the Arab Spring and its challenges to Israel – but will also look toward the opportunities it may bring to Israel, which is still struggling break the impasse of a century old conflict. One such broad opportunity may come from an old- yet- new direction, The Arab Peace Initiative which offers a possible platform to re-orient a broader picture of relations in the Middle East. In this concluding class we will further review the changing face of the Middle East and discuss with regional players the possibilities of new alliances and new opportunities that may further develop as the dust of the “Arab Spring” begins to settle.
