What Can I Study in the Graduate Non-Degree Program?

Study Abroad for Graduate Students

We offer courses and seminars in Bible studies and Biblical archaeology, Jewish and religious studies, Islamic and Middle Eastern studies, Israel studies, nonprofit management and leadership, and business administration and entrepreneurship. You may also enroll in courses through Hebrew University's other faculties and departments, with permission.

Languages

Highly experienced faculty lead our immersive programs in a wide variety of languages:

- Modern Hebrew
- Literary Arabic
- Biblical Hebrew
- Arabic
- Additional ancient languages such as Akkadian, Biblical Aramaic, Greek, and Ugaritic, offered periodically.

Visiting Researchers

If your primary interest is research and collaboration with HebrewU faculty, and you do not wish to take courses, you may explore our Visiting Research Fellow option. This program grants you access to university libraries, archives, computer centers, and academic advising.

If you're pursuing your Ph.D. and wish to conduct research and take courses in your field of interest, you may apply as a Visiting Research Student.

Special Program for Spanish Speakers

Spanish speakers may enroll in our Iberian and Latin American Studies and the Middle East program, offered each spring semester.

Enjoy Life in Jerusalem

Jerusalem is a meeting point for East and West, ancient and modern, religious and secular. You can experience this unique blend of cultures by exploring archaeological and religious sites; visiting ethnic neighborhoods; frequenting local museums, eateries, and festivals; and participating in events sponsored by Jerusalem's emerging high-tech and social business sector.

Student Support

You'll enjoy student services tailored to fit your needs throughout your stay in Jerusalem. A staff of Israeli students who work as Graduate Community Coordinators (madrichim) will be there to support you. They also work with the Office of Student Life to plan a rich extracurricular program, including tours, cultural events, lectures, and more.
